Puppy Proofing Your Home by Suezanne M. Law

Puppies can get into lots of trouble, even inside their own homes. If you live with a pup or even an older dog, it's important to puppy-proof your house to make sure your four-legged friend grows up healthy and happy.

Keep food, and especially chocolate and coffee, in tightly-closed containers, and place those containers behind closed doors so that your dog isn't tempted to counter-surf. Sugar-free gum, even in small amounts can be toxic to dogs, so keep it away from your puppy, even after you've chewed it and thrown it away. Speaking of toxic: household chemicals such as cleaning products and bug spray are extremely dangerous to you and your dog, so stay away from those! Many children's toys have small parts that can choke your puppy or make him sick, and magnets and batteries are especially dangerous if your dog swallows them. Make sure that power cords for electronic items and appliances are hidden behind furniture where your dog can't chew on them. Use candles only in areas where your pup isn't allowed. And of course, watch out for open doors which might tempt your four-legged friend to run outside if he becomes excited or scared.

Search the chart below and circle all of the dangerous things that might make your home unsafe for your puppy!
